The power of this tool is that you can customize your scripts to suit your needs. It is very flexible, and you can create hotkeys for anything. As long as AutoHotKey finds a command in the script, it will work. For example, you can set a hotkey to process a keyboard sequence (such as pressing a sequence of keys or using a keyboard combination) or to process a mouse action. Important Changes made in AutoHotKey 1.3 do not apply to the 1.2 versions of AutoHotKey. Security AutoHotKey uses a certificate in memory to store its secrets. When AutoHotKey exits, it checks the certificate to determine whether or not it should be erased. This only happens when AutoHotKey has restarted. AutoHotKey is not Windows Service. It does not need to be started, it can be easily started and stopped. Restart the computer when you start using AutoHotKey.
